DETAILED ACTION

1. This communication is in response to Applicant's amendment filed on February 27, 2007. Claims 1-20 are pending in the application.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

The factual inquiries set forth in Graham v. John Deere Co., 383 U.S. 1, 148 USPQ 459 (1966), that are applied for establishing a background for determining obviousness under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) are summarized as follows:

1. Determining the scope and contents of the prior art.
 2. Ascertaining the differences between the prior art and the claims at issue.
 3. Resolving the level of ordinary skill in the pertinent art.
 4. Considering objective evidence present in the application indicating obviousness or nonobviousness.
2. Claims 1-20 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Davidson (US 5,699,527) in view of Norris (US 5,870,721).

Claims 1-6, 14-19, Davidson teaches a system and corresponding method for producing and sending a loan document to a customer, the system comprising, a web-enabled customer interface which receives loan information from the customer (col. 5, lines 2-12), a network coupled to the customer interface, the network receives the loan information from the customer interface (col. 5, lines 23-39), a web site coupled to the network, the web site receives the loan information and merges the loan information with a loan application form to produce a loan application (col. 6, lines 20-39), a loan processor coupled to the web site, the loan processor receives the loan application, performs a credit check on the customer based on the loan application (col. 4, lines 33-38; col. 5, lines 37-39); and a document server coupled to the loan processor, the document server generates and sends the loan document to the customer, based on the loan application, when the loan processor determines that the customer should receive the loan, the loan processor sends the loan document to the customer through one of e-mail, facsimile, the network, a first printer coupled to the network, and a second printer coupled to another network (col. 7, lines 6-11)

Davidson does not explicitly teach that the loan processor determines whether the customer should receive a loan based on the credit check. Norris teaches a loan approval determination based on credit check; and generating and sending loan agreement and related documentation to the customer via facsimile (abstract, col. 2, lines 13-15 and 35-39). It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time of the invention to modify Davidson to include these features as taught by Norris for the obvious reason of ensuring that the applicant is credit worthy and for speedy transmittal of all related and necessary documents between the lender and customer.

Claims 7-13 and 20; Davidson and Norris teach all the claimed limitations as discussed above with respect to claims 1-6 and 14-19. Davidson and Norris do not explicitly teach that cashing a check indicates acceptance by the customer of the terms listed in the loan document, checking the validity of the check and verifying the customer account by sending a test transaction.

Official notice is hereby taken that the steps of cashing a check to indicate acceptance by the customer of the terms listed in the loan document, checking the validity of the check and verifying the customer account by sending a test transaction are old and well known.

It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time of the invention to modify Davidson to include these features. One would have been motivated to do so in order to allow the customer to accept the loan by cashing the check. Verifying the customer account allows the lender to ensure that the account to which money is deposited actually belongs to the customer, thereby preventing fraud or error.

Response to Arguments

3. Applicant's arguments with respect to claims have been considered but are moot in view of the new ground(s) of rejection.

Conclusion

4. The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure.

"Mailing of loan checks receives fresh scrutiny from consumer groups", New York Times, Jan. 3, 2000, teaches cashing checks to indicate the acceptance of loan terms (Para 8).
